Daytime Exploration: History

Start your history journey at the Gallup Visitors Center (106 W Hwy 66) at the Navajo Code Talkers Exhibit. From there, head down to the Veterans Exhibit at the Comfort Suites (3940 E Hwy 66), the 2018 New Mexico Hospitality Top HAT Award winner for Best Limited Service Hotel. This exhibit features Gallup’s own Medal of Honor Recipient Hiroshi Miyamura (also seen on Netflix’s “Medal of Honor.”) Heading east on Route 66, you can step further into history at the Red Rock Park Museum (inside Red Rock Park Convention Center), which features a collection of native artifacts and histories of the tribes in the region. Circling back to downtown experience the Storyteller’s Museum at the Gallup Cultural Center (201 E Hwy 66) where kachinas, train models, and sand paintings come together to vividly express the rich history of the Gallup area. With extra time stop at the historic Rex Museum (300 W Hwy 66) and learn about Gallup’s beginnings and rich coal mining history.

Daytime Exploration: Public Art

Gallup’s downtown area has over 14 public murals painted by the artists from our incredibly diverse artistic community. Visit page 30 for the map of the murals and where they are located. While downtown stop at Gallup’s only “New Mexico True Certified” Gallup Coffee Company for a fresh cup of coffee roasted in house (203 W Coal Avenue). While there, browse their rotating collection of art by local artists, then hop across second street to ART123 (123 W Coal), or turn the corner and head over to Opo Gallery (305 S Second Street) or Free Spirit Gallery (112 W Hill). After that you can wander over to the historic McKinley County Court House, built in 1938 in the Spanish Pueblo Revival Style. The Courthouse is home to 19 pieces of New Deal Art and a beautiful historic courtroom featuring a wraparound mural of the history of the area painted by Lloyd Moylan that was completed in 1940 and restored in 1991. For some additional family friendly art, hop in the car and head to Gallup’s north side and experience “We the People” Park (on Maloney at Ford Canyon Rd). This park is named for the sculpture inside that stands 110 feet long and is surrounded by other sculptures representing “free speech, pluralism, democracy, and our coexistence with the environment” and was completed by artist Armando Alvarez in 1994. The park is listed in the Smithsonian Art Database.

Daytime Exploration: Native American Arts

It is often hard to know where to start when shopping for and exploring Native American arts in a town that produces over 70% of the world’s retail Native American arts. Begin your trip with Richardson’s Trading Post (223 W Hwy 66). This historic trading post gives a great insight into the traditional art forms as well as has a unique rug room that is surrounded by showcases of Gallup Native Art History artifacts. From there, walk on down to Silver Dust Trading (121 W Hwy 66) where you can shop for the stones themselves, from authentic to cultured (ask the staff and they can teach you all about the differences between natural, stabilized, cultured and more!) and one of the area’s largest bead suppliers. Just down the road you can visit Red Shell Jewelry (119 W Hwy 66) and check out some Spiny Oyster shell first hand, and learn about how it is turned into unique pieces set in the wide variety of Native American Jewelry. Tanner’s Indian Arts recently featured a trunk show at the MET Museum, and you can visit them and learn about their incredible collection. You can’t go wrong in any of the incredible shops along Route 66! Just outside of downtown are two incredible trading post assets: Perry Null Trading (1710 S 2nd Street) and Ellis Tanner Trading (1980 NM 602). Both of these trading posts have unique showcases and murals that represent Gallup’s trading history and in both businesses you can meet artists who are doing business and selling directly to the trading posts.
From May to September experience the free Summer Nightly Indian Dances at Courthouse Square (215 W Aztec Avenue) and then head on down to the historic El Rancho Hotel (1000 E Hwy 66) for a glimpse into Gallup’s unique western film history. The El Rancho features a stunning historic lodge style lobby, a restaurant, and the 49er bar, where film greats like John Wayne and Kirk Douglas used to kick back. If you’re a sports or rock and roll fan make sure you don’t miss Sammy C’s Rockin’ Sports Pub & Grille (107 W Coal Avenue) for the largest collection of sports memorabilia in western New Mexico, and one of CNN’s Top 100 Sports Bar & Pubs in 2012. The historic El Morro Theatre, built in 1928, is the perfect place to relax for a movie or an event in the heart of downtown Gallup. Movies and events begin at 6pm on weeknights and have multiple showings on the weekends. Children 12 and under are free with an adult for films at the El Morro. For other great family fun in the evenings visit Pizza 9’s Indoor Neon Mini-Golf at Rio West Mall, or the Sky Hop Bounce/Play Area (1300 W Maloney).

Gallup can act as a great central hub for a lot of incredible adventure in the Northwestern part of New Mexico and beyond. You can immerse yourself in Native American culture in Window Rock, the Capitol of the Navajo Nation. They have a tribute to the Navajo Code Talkers at the beautiful Window Rock itself, or you can stop into the Navajo Nation Museum or Zoo. (drive time 45 minutes). If you continue heading north you can view the stunning Shiprock and shop at the Toadlena Trading Post, which has been around since the 1870s. Visit Chaco Canyon National Historic Park (2-3 hour drive time depending on route) and immerse yourself in the largest preserved area of Pueblo culture in the United States. There’s also Acoma Sky City Cultural Center & Haak’u Museum, where you can take tours of this National Trust for Historic Preservation site’s rich cultural history. The Zuni Pueblo is also only a brief 45 minute drive south of Gallup, NM.

For travelers heading through the region, one of the most beautiful stretches of untouched country is the Scenic By-way 53. From I-40 this area can be accessed by heading south on Hwy 602 from Gallup and then heading East, or getting off at exit 85 on I-40 and heading west. Near Grants, NM, you can visit the Bandera Volcano and Ice Cave, or stop by the Route 66 Neon Arch and the New Mexico Mining Museum in the heart of Grants. This beautiful highway brings you through two national monuments: El Malpais National Monument, where you can explore caves and see bats fly, or the El Morro National Monument, where you can see the historic inscriptions of the Conquistadors and visit Zuni Pueblo Ruins. This area has a great little restaurant at the Ancient Way Café & RV Park, Inscription Rock Café, several art galleries, and then down the road is the Wild Spirit Wolf Sanctuary. Continuing along the way you can visit the largest pueblo in New Mexico, the Zuni Pueblo, where art and history come alive in their Art Walk and Cultural Hiking Tours.

ABOUT US

Gallup was founded in 1881 as a railhead for the Atlantic and Pacific Railroad. The city was named after David Gallup, a paymaster for the railroad.

Gallup is often called the “Indian Capital of the World” for its location in the heart of Native American lands and the presence of Navajo, Zuni, Hopi, and other tribes.

98th Annual Gallup Inter-Tribal Indian Ceremonial

The Gallup Inter-Tribal Indian Ceremonial is the longest continuously running event in New Mexico. For more than ninety years, the Inter-Tribal Indian Ceremonial has been a celebration of Native American culture and identity, displayed through traditional dances, rodeo events, exhibitions of fine art, lively parades, and delicious food.

The historic El Morro Theatre in Gallup, New Mexico, is a movie theatre and performing arts center. Designed by noted theater architect Carl Boller, the facility opened in 1928 as a “castle of pleasure and art”. It shares a common heritage with the KiMo Theater in Albuquerque and the Lensic Theater in Santa Fe, both also being Boller-designed theaters. Today, the 460-seat theater is used for film exhibition and performing arts. In 2015, the city dedicated the El Morro Events Center, a multi-purpose meeting facility that is connected to the historic theatre. In addition, the theatre features comfortable seating, a new Dolby Digital 7.1 Sound System, a high-end Christie Digital Projector, and new curtains and aisle lights to make your movie going experience top notch. Tours of the facility are free during business hours (evenings after 6pm and weekends between 2pm-10pm) or by appointment (call 505-726-2600). In addition, programs and showtimes, as well as historic photos, can be found at www.elmorrotheatre.com.

The sport of rodeo is alive and well in and around Gallup! From early spring through late fall, rodeos occur on most weekends at family arenas and larger venues around the Four Corners area.

Rodeos include several events, usually bareback riding, steer wrestling, team roping, saddle bronc riding, tie-down roping, steer roping, barrel racing, and bull riding.

During the summer, Gallup’s Red Rock Park host several of the largest rodeo events in the area.

Collectors and Art Lovers from around the world come to Gallup to purchase authentic Native American art. The popularity of Native American jewelry has grown tremendously, but that has resulted in a blossoming imitation art industry. Advocates for the authenticity of Native American arts are fighting hard against those who are damaging the livelihood of the genuine Native Artists. Fortunately, there are ways that you can learn how to shop “real”. Here are three recommendations on how to discern the quality of the jewelry you’re shopping for:

1. Ask the questions:
   a. Is it nickel or sterling silver?
   b. Is the turquoise treated, stabilized, or natural?
   c. Is the piece stamped by an artist?

   All of these questions add up to factor into the next suggestion.

2. Determine if the deal is “too good to be true”.
   a. Natural turquoise is a high grade gem quality stone and many of the mines have closed over the years so the supply is limited. This comes with a higher price tag.
b. Some pieces may be nickel silver with sterling silver plating. You can tell by the weight of the piece (especially larger ones like bolos and cuff bracelets) – the heavier the piece the more likely it is that the material is sterling.

c. Sterling silver comes at a higher cost and you also need to factor in the labor of the artist.

3. Make more than one stop and ask around – get the local insight.
   a. Ask the residents of the community where they shop.
   b. Ask people about their favorite artists and why – some artists deal exclusively with particular traders and you want to make sure you're headed in the right direction.
   c. Look at reviews on travel sites (Tripadvisor, Yelp, etc) and check out the artist and trader's websites. Many have websites that can give you more in-depth information about the artists themselves and how the pieces are made.

There is a directory of traders in this visitor's guide as well as on www.GallupRealTrue.com, where you can find links to their websites.

Regardless of quality and price we encourage you to invest in what you love – if you love how it looks, take it home. We want you to be able to talk about your experience buying your piece positively and with pride, and there is something for every collector and shopper in Gallup.
In 1886, a trader by the name of John Bradford (J.B.) Moore purchased a Trading Post in Crystal, New Mexico. Located at the base of the Chuska Mountains on the west side, it made for a beautiful location but with harsh winters. The previous owner would close the Trading Post during the winter months. However, J.B. would remain open and employed Navajo weavers to make rugs in a style that was loosely based on popular Oriental weavings of the time. Of course, Navajo rugs had already been woven for centuries, but they had yet to be marketed like J.B. Moore was about to do.

The J.B. Moore catalog first appeared in 1903 and was sent to potential mail order customers located in populated parts of the United States. This important catalog would introduce many for the first time to the Navajo and their crafts. Moore would educate people on the process of Navajo rug weaving, the materials used, and the spiritual qualities of the weavings. Another catalog was published in 1911, and both catalogs would be very successful.

Other Indian Traders would play very important roles in the development of the Navajo rug industry. John Lorenzo Hubbell of the famed Hubbell Trading Post in Ganado, Arizona promoted Navajo weaving and had a part in the creations of Ganado Red and Klagetoh. Local Gallup, Indian Trader C.N. Cotton also played a pivotal role in promoting Navajo rugs. Like J.B. Moore, he would create mail order catalogs which would sell Navajo rugs across the country.

Gallup now serves as the source to find these fascinating weavings. Only a handful of Trading Posts remain on the Navajo Nation. You will find our local Trading Posts filled with Ganado Reds, vegetal-dyed Wide Ruins, storm patterns, raised outlines, Yei’ be’ Chei’, Klagetoh, and many other styles from the Navajo rug weavers. On your visit to the Trading Post, you might even be lucky enough to see one of these talented weavers come into the business to sell their rug: A transaction which can take a good amount of time to complete, where the trader and weaver go back and forth until the right price is met.

For centuries pottery has been associated with the Native American culture. These skills were essential for survival. Early Native American communities would use pottery to hold water, keep grain, store food, and keep seeds for the next growing seasons. Every time old ruins are found, you know that many different shapes and sizes of pottery will be unearthed. If you have seen one of these early pieces of pottery, you recognize that they are only similar to today’s pottery in shape and size.

Eventually, pottery would stop having a utilitarian use and become a work of art. The first tribes who would become known for their decorative pottery would be the Pueblo Tribes along the Rio Grande Valley and the Hopi who inhabit the high mesas of Arizona. Names like Nampeyo and Maria would turn a not-so-appreciated art into something highly regarded and an extremely valuable collectible. The Navajo would even begin to create their pitch pottery for the market.

The first collectors would take their buying trips to the Rio Grande Valley and the isolated Hopi Mesas. However, Gallup continued to play a very important role in developing the Native American arts and crafts industry. This made perfect sense because of its proximity to the Navajo, Zuni and Hopi Reservations. Artists simply had to make the trip into Gallup to sell their handmade crafts. As the arts and crafts industry grew, it drew those artists from the Rio Grande Pueblos and Acoma to make the journey here to sell.

Today, when you walk into one of Gallup’s many Native American arts businesses, you will be greeted by some amazing displays of handmade pottery. You will find shelves filled with lizards, owls, and deer decorating Zuni bowls, canteens, and jars. The many styles of Hopi pottery, whether it is a decorated plate, a large wedding vase, or a unique carved Kachina. Acoma pottery will be immediately recognized because of those fine black geometric designs against a white background. Navajo artists will etch intricate designs into ceramic pottery and finish them with a delicate painted scene. Plus, you will find those coveted pieces of Santa Clara, Zia and Santa Ana Pueblo pieces that have made the journey from the Rio Grande Valley.

PAWN — GALLUP STYLE

It isn’t what you are thinking. Pawn is a little different in Gallup. Here you will find pawn shops serve more as a personal safe then they do a traditional pawn shop. When many of you think of a pawn shop you imagine a shop filled with electronics and gold jewelry for sale. However, in Gallup you will find most of the shops that offer pawn services without huge inventories of pawn for sale, often referred to as dead pawn.

Our pawn shops are filled with turquoise bracelets, coral beads, 100-year-old Concho belts, squash blossom necklaces, ceremonial buckskins, baskets, saddles, rugs, and Pendleton blankets. These are the valuables that the Navajo and Zuni pawn customers use to secure loans instead of working with a traditional bank. It is a much easier transaction that doesn’t involve the scrutiny of a credit check and the lengthy application forms of a bank loan. It is a system that has worked here since New Mexico was a territory instead of a State.

You also need to remember the vastness of the Navajo Nation and the remoteness of the Zuni Reservation. Many customers use the pawn shop to keep their family heirlooms safe. Pawn Shop vaults serve as the customer’s personal safe and are filled with priceless family heirlooms. These prized possessions will be taken out when needed for special occasions like ceremonies, graduations, weddings and when they are passed onto the next generation.

No trip to Gallup is complete without a visit to one of our great Pawn Shops. Once you enter a local pawn shop, you will be immersed in an old way of doing business. Pawn clerks know the name of their customers, and the customers use their time in the pawn shop to visit with other customers they haven’t seen in a while. Plus, if you ask nice enough you might just get a tour of one of these fascinating businesses.
When the United States Government moved west and started to claim territory, a system was needed to take care of these new American citizens. The Government gave contracts to adventurous businessmen who would set up Trading Posts on the remote parts of the Navajo Reservation. These new businesses would supply area residents with the essentials like coffee and flour. It would eventually evolve into a very important part of the community.

As the years passed and Gallup transitioned into a major trade center for the Navajo Nation, many of these Indian Traders would move off of the Reservation and into Gallup. The roles of the Trading Post would also change. No longer would their shelves be supplying local residents with the everyday essentials, but instead showcases would be added to display all of the beautiful Native American arts and crafts which were being made by our local artisans.

Gallup is the destination for Native American arts and crafts buyers. Buyers might be individual collectors or wholesalers who come here to purchase authentic Native American arts for their own businesses. The success of marketing Native American arts and crafts to those outside our region has created a thriving cottage industry for our local Native American artisans. It is not uncommon to find entire families who work fulltime in hand-making arts and crafts for local businesses.

This system of local craftsmen and Trading Posts works perfectly. It allows the artist to concentrate on their work without having to operate a retail outlet. The Trading Post is able to accumulate a diverse collection from various artists to please the tastes of the many different buyers who make the journey here. If your trip to Gallup wasn’t about Native American art, you definitely need to make time to visit one of our many Trading Posts. Once you walk through the doors of one of these businesses, you will be amazed by all the gleaming silver and beautiful stones, colorful rugs, detailed Kachina carvings, paintings, and incredible pottery.
